
conservative substitution

In a gene product, a substitution of one amino acid with another with generally similar properties (size, hydrophobicity, etc), such that the overall functioning is likely not to be seriously affected.

(18 Nov 1997)

Previous: conservation of natural resources, conservative, conservative replication

Next: conservative treatment, conserve, conserved sequence
